THE ENLIGHTENED DICTATORSHIP
Genealogy of an audiovisual propaganda culture in Chile [73/78]

Pablo Leighton
B.A. in Journalism, Universidad Católica de Chile
M.F.A. in Filmmaking, Massachusetts College of Art, Boston
PhD in Latino American Studies, Universidad de Santiago de Chile

This thesis is presented for the degree of Doctor in Philosophy at the Media, Music and Cultural Studies Department, Faculty of Arts, Macquarie University, Sydney, Australia, October 2012.
Table of Contents

Summary vi

Statement of candidate vii

Acknowledgements viii

Foreword ix

Purposes and design of research ix
Scope of research xii
Forms of the thesis xiv

Research Lexicon xix

Chile xix
Genealogy xxii
Culture xxvii
Audiovisual culture xxxiv
Propaganda xlii
Hegemony xlvi

Prologue: Message zero 1

Chapter 1: Armed television 13

First sequence: Message one 13
A. Flashback 15
B. Interior/Night 17

Second sequence: National chain 24
C. What is to be done 27
D. What to see 32
E. Normalcy 40

Third sequence: Continuity television 45
F. Reproduction 46
G. Everyday news 50
Chapter 2: Montage

Fourth sequence: Grey propaganda
  H. Primary source 61
  I. Culture of faith 69
  J. Propaganda fide 78

Fifth sequence: Black propaganda 94
  K. First literacy plan 95
  L. DINA journalism 101
  M. War correspondents 115
  N. Darkening of a format 124

Chapter 3: Scripts 133

Sixth sequence: Culture of a personality 134
  O. Image of dominance 134
  P. Persuasive image 138

Seventh sequence: The new illustrated history 154
  Q. Urgent history 154
  R. Cinematic history 159

Eighth sequence: Audiovisual refoundation 177
  S. Reconstruction 178
  T. Rebirth 185
  U. Projection 199
  V. Institutionalisation 219

Chapter 4: Archives of culture 242

Ninth sequence: National collection 245
  W. Folklore 245
  X. Culture segment 247

Tenth sequence: Stellar collection 250
  Y. The event 250
  Z. Organic intellectuals 258

Epilogue 268
Endnotes

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Endnotes chapter 1</th>
<th>280</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Endnotes chapter 2</td>
<td>291</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Endnotes chapter 3</td>
<td>301</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Endnotes chapter 4</td>
<td>312</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Individual references

313

Institutional references

343
Summary

This work explores a feature of cultural power developed during the Chilean dictatorship (1973-90), particularly the ways by which audiovisual mass media helped in the rise and stability of that government, and articulated its foundational discourses.

The study contemplates the building of hegemony in Chile; in other words, the creation of politico-social consent by cultural forms of power. The thesis investigates the manifestation of popular support to the Chilean dictatorship and its dominance using non-repressive means, at a singular moment (1973-78), universally associated with violent coercion. The thesis proposes that in order to observe and understand that power equation —the will to govern by force without completely discarding consent— one of its cultural forms must be exposed. An audiovisual culture illustrates and assists that equation in the most evocative manner during the most repressive stage of the dictatorship.

The tension between coercion and consent in Chile, a crossroad of fields of action and discourses, demands more than one discipline of study. This research does not prioritise academic disciplines because of their scientific or methodological features, but opts for one juncture of knowledge: a cultural history. This approach privileges form over content, and culture above political-economic determinations. The study, a particular cultural history, focuses on a case study also with its own tension: a communication medium that has the exceptional capacity of both reproducing and building events.

The thesis identifies a historical phase when the method of coercion was primarily supplemented by propaganda practices. Specifically, the study concludes that the dictatorship from its inaugural night favoured one cultural modality to communicate and create consent: television. Secondly, the propaganda practice that hid or distorted the use of violence as political control was more effective when it coincided with an audiovisual culture. Thirdly, during this stage the dictatorship encountered the most evocative expression for a systemic re-foundation in the audiovisual medium: it personalised political power in the figure of Augusto
Pinochet; legitimised the violent takeover through a visual historiography of the prior government; and supported through televised events a constitutional re-foundation and a neoliberal revolution. Finally, the thesis argues that the preference for television allowed its industrial and discursive growth and relative autonomy. The use of audiovisual culture in the period covered by the thesis marked the path towards a fully cultural phase of the medium in Chile and of the dictatorship in the future, when the image of despotism gradually disappeared to consummate a hegemony.
Statement of Candidate

I certify that the work in this thesis entitled “The enlightened dictatorship: genealogy of an audiovisual culture of propaganda in Chile [73/78]” has not previously been submitted for a degree nor has it been submitted as part of requirements for a degree to any other university or institution other than Macquarie University and Universidad de Santiago (cotutelle).

I also certify that the thesis is an original piece of research and it has been written by me. Any help and assistance that I have received in my research work and the preparation of the thesis itself have been appropriately acknowledged. In addition, I certify that all information sources and literature used are indicated in the thesis.

The research presented in this thesis did not need approval by Macquarie University Ethics Review Committee.

Pablo Leighton
I give thanks firstly to Bryoni and Bela Trezise for all their encouragement and unconditional backing from the beginning. I am also grateful to Carmen Cerda, Patricio Leighton, Kathy Trezise and Daryl Trezise for their support.

I am thankful to Ana Pizarro, Nicole Mathews, Andrew Murphie, Gunther Minnerup, Mark Evans, Marea Mitchell, Kathryn Millard, Anne Thoeming, Renata Murawska, Estela Valverde and the staff at Macquarie University’s Higher Degree Research and Faculty of Arts who made this project possible.