Police education and police practice.

K. Pennell. B.Sc. M.A.

A thesis submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the Degree of Ed.D.

21 January, 2002
Copyright in relation to this Thesis

Under the Copyright Act 1968 (several provisions of which are referred to below), this material must be used only under the normal conditions of scholarly fair dealing for the purposes of research, criticism or review. In particular no results or conclusions should be extracted from it, nor should it be copied or closely paraphrased in whole or in part without the written consent of the author. Proper written acknowledgement should be made for any assistance obtained from this material.

Under Section 35 (2) of the Copyright Act 1968 'the author of a literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work is the owner of any copyright subsisting in the work'. By virtue of Section 32 (1) copyright 'subsists in an original literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work that is unpublished' land of which the author was an Australian citizen, an Australian protected person or a person resident in Australia.

The Act, by Section 36 (1) provides: 'Subject to this Act, the copyright in a literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work is infringed by a person who, not being the owner of the copyright and without the licence of the owner of the copyright, does in Australia, or authorises the doing in Australia of, any act comprised in the copyright'.

Section 31 (1) (a) (i) provides that copyright includes the exclusive right to 'reproduce the work in a material form'. Thus, copyright is infringed by a person who, not being the owner of the copyright, reproduces or authorises the reproduction of a work, or of more than a reasonable part of the work, in a material form, unless the reproduction is a 'fair dealing' with the work 'for the purpose of research or study' as further defined in Sections 40 and 41 of the Act.

Section 51 (2) provides that "Where a manuscript, or a copy, of material of other similar literary work that has not been published is kept in a library of a university or other similar institution or in an archives, the copyright in the material or other work is not infringed by the making of a copy of the material or other work by or on behalf of the officer in charge of the library or archives if the copy is supplied to a person who satisfies an authorized officer of the library or archives that he requires the copy for the purpose of research or study'.

* Thesis' includes 'treatise', 'dissertation' and other similar productions.
Declaration

I certify that the substance of this thesis has not already been submitted for any degree and is not currently being submitted for any other degree.

I certify that help received in preparing this thesis, and all sources used, have been acknowledged in this thesis.

Signature: [Signature]
Kym Pennell
Acknowledgements

I wish to thank Professor Kevin Harris, my supervisor for his invaluable advice and support in the preparation of this thesis. Thankyou also to Maree McEvoy for her administrative efforts and Mark Doyle for reading the draft and for his valuable suggestions.

I would also like to thank the library staff of Macquarie University, the Australian Police Staff College and the NSW Police Service Academy for making available their collections and assisting me in my endeavours.

A special thankyou also to my family for putting up with the grump.
Abstract

A perception of escalating social disorder and allegations of police corruption and ineptitude have led to a social and political imperative to reform policing. Fundamental to this reform is the modification of the core mission of the police and the operational practices of the uniformed Constable. The core characteristics of policing and the operational practices of the uniformed Constable are determined by the core mission and the operational context of policing.

Despite an imperative to reform the quality and provision of police services to the community the core mission of the police has not fundamentally altered during the last half century and remains crime control (Zaho, 1996). The core mission of contemporary policing has been criticised for being in direct conflict with basic democratic principles and for being simply unachievable. This thesis will establish that the origins and occurrence of crime, its prevalence and persistence is determined by social, economic and cultural factors that are beyond the control of the police. It will be argued that long-term successful law-enforcement in a democratic society requires the acceptance, cooperation and approval of the community. Community oriented policing may provide the theoretical framework for internalising normative controls and for enhancing public participation in and sharing responsibility for crime control.

It will be demonstrated that the strategic shift in policing implicit within the theoretical framework of community policing has significant implications for the reform of police education and training. Several commentators and various Commissions of Inquiry have recommended upgrading police education and training, and the participation of police in tertiary education.

The reform of police practice is contingent upon the reform of the core mission and the operational context of policing. The core mission and the operational context of policing is substantially defined, controlled and manipulated by the perceptions, expectations and actions of stakeholders. Directly or indirectly these have been found to be antithetical to alternative models of policing that are service orientated; thus blocking, diluting or redirecting efforts to implement community policing.

Unless the core mission of the police and the operational context of policing are substantially modified then police education will continue to have a limited impact upon the operational practices of the uniformed Constable.
Table of Contents

Acknowledgements v
Abstract vii
Table of contents xi

Chapter 1. Introduction: Police Education and Police practice 1
  1.1 Background 1
  1.2 The literature 3
  1.3 The study 4
  1.4 Conceptual framework 5
  1.5 Clarification of terms 5
  1.6 Literature review 6
  1.7 Conclusion 10
  1.8 Outline of the study 10

Section I. The Police 14
Chapter 2. 'Police': a definition 14
  2.1 Conclusion 17

Chapter 3. Policing in a democratic society: the role dilemma 19
  3.1 Conclusion 23

Chapter 4. Contemporary Policing: a convergence of ideas 25
  4.1 Conclusion 28
Chapter 10. The Police culture

10.1 Research on the Police Culture
10.2 The Police Culture
10.3 Working Personality
10.4 Core characteristics of the police culture
10.5 Transmission of the police culture
10.6 Rules
10.7 Police misbehaviour
10.8 The police culture and 'law-enforcement'
10.9 The 'war against crime'
10.10 Conclusion

Chapter 11. The Police Organisation

11.1 Conclusion

Section V. Police Education and Training

Chapter 12. Police Education and Training - Models of learning

12.1 Systems approach
12.2 The 'expert or craft' model
12.3 Professional model of Police education and training
12.4 Conclusion

Chapter 13. Police Education and Training - Providers

13.1 Police academies
13.2 Tertiary institutions
13.3 Conclusion

Chapter 14. Police education and training - evaluation of 'training' models

14.1 Impact upon police practice
14.2 Curriculum and education content
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Appendices</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Appendix A  Major criminological theories</td>
<td>227</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Appendix B  Minority group characteristics</td>
<td>228</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Bibliography 229